Colombia: The conflict on the Araucan border

For its plan of 'Endless War' the United States form armed groups with demobilized Colombian guerrillas, with one of these installed on the Colombian-Venezuelan border of the Arauca River, the conflict has erupted last January First.

In Colombia we are witnessing the repowering of paramilitarism to annihilate the growing Social Conflict and confront the guerrilla insurgency.

- 1) We are facing a resurgence of a new paramilitarism devised and organized by the Military Forces of the Colombian State and the United States within its counterinsurgency plan; in the particular case, the confrontation that is taking place at this moment in Arauca is against the group commanded by Arturo Paz, described as an infiltrator in the service of the Army since before the demobilization of the FARC, who has been attacking the Araucan population and the National Liberation Army.
- 2) For a decade the social organizations of Arauca eradicated coca without the help of the Government or the international community, today all the inhabitants refuse to return to this crop, but Arturo's group offers the poorest 10 million Pesos to replant, which generated the frontal clash with the Elenos Fronts and with social organizations.
- 3) The confrontation worsened after the return of drug trafficking to the department, flooding it with gangs even brought from Venezuela, such as the dreaded Aragua Train with whom Arturo's ended up in War at the end of 2021.
- 4) There is documented evidence of collusion of the Military Forces with this group, which allows it to grow, went from having 10 to 200 armed men and operating in the vicinity of the regime's troops, in addition to Arturo carrying out operations entrusted to him by the military.
- 5) To instruct Arturo's group, they simulated the kidnapping in Saravena of Army Colonel Pedro Enrique Arciniegas, who for eight months was with this group giving them instruction in military and intelligence operations; as one of those captured during the clashes that occurred in the first days of this month has confessed.

6) This Hybrid War Operation is conducted from the Marine Corps Special Forces Base located in Arauquita, which in turn is the headquarters of one of the Security Assistance Forces Brigades (Sfab), composed of U.S. officers executing the Military Advisory Plan developed by the United States Government with the Colombian regime.
