The world is going to the pailas...

If you look at history, the two world wars took place thanks to mental dwarfs like the ones we have now. Unfortunately, the powers that be of big finance estimate that a good war, one as requested, is terribly lacking. Sheep do what sheep do: we let ourselves beheaded...

My corduroy, the excellent Jorge Lillo, cracked with a luminous Popular Lyre entitled Séver la odnum led arto that the fastest of the pumpkin immediately read Another of the world upside down.

Timely, I told myself, preclear, lucid, fine, shrewd, enlightened. It happens that looking around I see nothing but darkness, dark shadows, darkness of just world, tunnel blackness, lobregeces of intestinal hollowness, darkness and opacities of here the trip ends. Worse, I see world leagues proud to be shitting and determined to finish shitting it definitively and irremediably.

The Empire, for a hesitant moment, by the hand of a senile Joe Biden,, gaga, definitely disconnected from its only active neuronal synapse, persists in controlling the uncontrollable: the world.

In its insane excess, the Empire wants to put russia and China on its knees, surround them, intimidate them, build a wall like the one Trump dreamed of to isolate Mexico but this time to cut off half of humanity. Europe, satisfied and proud of its status as a Protectorate, makes merits to become a colony as quickly as possible.

The rest of the world, that is, nothing, protects itself as it can after regimes that are not always recommended, whose first objective is limited to avoiding being part of the Yankee mountain range.

Ukraine, a country in pairo, serves as a pretext, a playing field, a laboratory guinea pig, a roast meat, a grata and a drumstick to cleanse the souls of the cannons generously offered by the Empire and its shoeshine.

The price is paid by all of us, starting with those of us who have the pleasure, honor and advantage of living in Europe, that curious continent specialized in world wars that make the fortunes of third parties, mostly Americans. Nothing new: on the eve of the world wars there were no lucid human beings, but patriots eager to put an end to the enemy designated by the big industrialists, big capital, the powerful banks that financed the war from both sides.

Has any European liar suggested stopping this mess, sitting somewhere to negotiate the peace that we pringaos yearn for? No. The urgency is to send weapons to Ukraine so that ukrainians, guided by a fascistic fantoche, defeat the "dictator" Putin.

The US and the European Union have, we have, the privilege and exclusivity of democratic regimes. It is already known: Hitler came to power thanks to the popular vote. Like the current President of the Council in Italy, or the banker who serves as President of the Council of Ministers of Poland and a couple of neo-Nazis that the EU does not see, does not want to see, or is simply too pusillanimous to exclude from democratic areopagus.

In the midst of this mambo, the European Union publicly congratulates itself on having reached a unanimous agreement after years of cumbersome negotiations: the imposition of a single cable to charge cell phones. Here's the news:

"The European Parliament voted on Tuesday, October 4, on legislation on the universal charger for electronic devices, the USB-C cable. A breakthrough for consumers and for the planet."

In the meantime, we are running out of energy. Half of the French nuclear reactors are stopped for lack of maintenance (they privatized the company) and the government recommends not turning on the lights. To repair such spawns, and build new nuclear power plants, the government took a brilliant step: it renationalized the company.

Meanwhile, the municipalities turn off the street lights plunging them into an unsettling darkness. From now on the heating of the houses will be limited to 19°C and the electricity company is empowered – thanks to the Linksys smart electric meter – to remotely turn off the chauffe-eau (water heater) that allows you to wash your ass with hot water.

Filling the pond of your car begins to create unprecedented problems: today the gas station in Montereau-Fault-Yonne – a town near the village where I live – had limited the waste to 25 liters per car. A privilege: 30% of gas stations are closed due to lack of supply.

You, who are a lynx, know the famous Law of Supply and Demand. Generating scarcity induces price increases. There are those who are making fortunes with this crisis. Inflation is skyrocketing, and numerous businesses, from artisan bakers to high-tech, are seriously considering closing their doors because they can't afford the price of energy.

I remember the words of the dwarves who govern us, a couple of months ago: "We don't need Russian gas or oil." Seriously? Our ministers crawl before undesirable governments, imploring the supply of gas and/or oil that we need.

This does not happen in an obscure Third World country but in my beloved France, which until not long ago was the fifth economic and financial power on the planet.

The state of Joe Biden's health begins to worry after starring in one of his almost daily lapses.

From the other side of the Atlantic, a senile, gaga, Joe Biden, definitely disconnected from his only active neuronal synapse, smiles. The Protectorate, imminent colony, obeys and is proud to be.

The world... the world? The world is going to the pailas...
