Afghanistan alleges foreign spy agency hand in Kabul hotel attack

March 23, 2014

The Afghan intelligence – national directorate of security (NDS) said Sunday that the Taliban group and Haqqani terrorist network were not involved behind the deadly attack on Serena hotel in Kabul.

Based on Afghan intelligence information which was presented to National Security Council (NSC) meeting chaired by president Hamid Karzai reveals that foreign spy agencies were directly involved in the attack.

National Security Council instructed the security institutions of Afghanistan to launch a comprehensive investigation regarding the attack.

Afghan interior ministry was also instructed to launch a comprehensive investigation regarding the possible negligence of a security firm – Shield Security to prevent the attack on hotel.

In the meantime, another intelligence finding reveals that a Pakistani diplomat had taken pictures from inside the hotel compound while he was visiting the health club of the hotel.

The Taliban militants group claimed responsibility behind the deadly attack on Serena hotel and said at least 22 people were killed following the attack.

However, Afghan intelligence – national directorate of security (NDS) said there were discrepancies between the Taliban group claims and what had actually happened inside the hotel.

At least nine people including four foreign nationals and a prominent Afghan journalist and his family members were killed during the attack which took place last Thursday.
