Taliban launch coordinated attack on security check posts in Kunar

June 17, 2015

The Taliban militants launched coordinated attack on a number of security check posts in eastern Kunar province of Afghanistan.

According to local security officials, the attack was launched on security check posts in Marwara district by hundreds of Taliban militants.

Provincial police chief Abdul Habib Syed Khel said additional forces were deployed to the area after the security forces made tactical retreat from a number of check posts.

There are no reports regarding the casualties incurred to the security forces or civilians as a result of the attack.

However, the provincial public health officials said at least 33 people injured during the clashes were taken to hospital for treatment.

The officials further added that a civilian was also killed during the gun battle.

Kunar is among the volatile provinces in eastern Afghanistan where anti-government armed militant groups are actively operating and frequently carry out insurgency activities.
