Paris... is a Mass worth it?

It was not the 30 pesos, but the 30 years

Thirty years of Concertación-Derecha co-government, thirty years of "consensus" and "cooking", during which the abused, the mocked, the run over, the exploited, the none... it was always the people of Chile.

To gain the throne, royal families practiced the worst crimes, including uxoricide, matricide, and parricide. Also spurious alliances. Louis XVIII appointed the regicide Joseph Fouché, who had approved the guillotining of his brother Louis XVI, as Minister of the Interior. Nowadays it is usually practiced the "cooking", the traffic of influences and above all the imbecility ...

Salvador Allende, vistiendo la «camisa de acero» de los combatientes antifascistas

En la Edad Media, Adalberto Iº rehusó levantar el asedio de Tours. El rey Hugues Capet lo llamó al orden preguntándole: “¿Quién te hizo conde?” Adalberto respondió con insolencia: “Y a ti... ¿Quién te hizo rey?”

No. Henri de Bourbon, rey de Navarra –que pasaría a la historia como Henri IV de Francia– nunca pronunció aquella frase apócrifa: “París vale una misa”.

Pero sí es cierto que John Fitzgerald Kennedy llegó a la presidencia de los EE. UU. gracias –entre otros– al amable concurso de la mafia: su padre se había enriquecido traficando alcohol en tiempos de la Prohibición y tenía una libreta de direcciones más larga que un lunes sin pan. John F. Kennedy lo pagó caro poco más tarde, en Dallas.

No pocos políticos llegaron al poder mediante componendas de las cuales no estuvo ausente ni la “cocina”, ni el tráfico de influencias, ni las oscuras transacciones, ni el dinero extranjero, ni siquiera el crimen. Todo eso conforma un dato de la causa.

A Sarkozy lo financió ilegalmente Muammar Gadafi, razón por la que luego –ya presidente de Francia– se lo cargó por la sencilla razón que los muertos no hablan (de todos modos, su ministro del Interior acaba de entrar en cana).

En los años 1980 Mitterrand le entreabrió una puerta a la extrema derecha para debilitar a la derecha republicana, gracias a lo cual accedió al Eliseo. El pato de la boda lo pagamos ahora, cuando esa derecha ultramontana se alza como una amenaza real en las presidenciales gabachas de mayo próximo.

Algunas veces las maniobras fallan: ya he contado cómo Fausta Flavia Máxima, esposa del emperador romano Constantino I, intentó subvertir el orden de sucesión imperial acusando a Crispus, hijo del primer matrimonio de Constantino, de querer levantarle la crinolina. Constantino, que estaba a punto de convertirse al catolicismo (lo hizo poco después) hizo asesinar a su propio hijo, posibilitando así la sucesión de un hijo de Fausta Flavia Máxima. No obstante, la madre de Constantino le hizo ver la maniobra y el emperador, ni corto ni perezoso, hizo hervir a Fausta Flavia Máxima quien, según cuentan, dio buena sopa.

En las elecciones presidenciales chilenas asistimos a la puesta en práctica –masiva y determinada– del consejo que canta con ritmo de tonada el Conjunto Cuncumén: “Quien a buen árbol se arrima, buena sombra le cobija”.

The worst of the parasitic political crust of the Concertación, the same one that created the disaster that led to the insurrection of October 18, 2019 and the conditions of the resurrection of neo-fascism headed by Kast, now appears as the deus ex machina in the eventual election of Gabriel Boric. Euripides would not have done better.

As a dear friend who is supporting Boric in the absence of anything else tells me, if Boric had a little bit of sesera he would have thanked from afar, politely, the support of Bachelet and Lagos adding: "I will try to do everything that you did not know, or rather did not want to do."

On the contrary, what the Yankees call a melting pot in which it is difficult to separate steel from slag seems to have occurred very quickly, assuming there is some steel.

It remains to be seen whether such confusion adds or subtracts.

Seen from the outside, it seemed more reasonable to address the 53% who abstained in the first round, the fruslería of 7 million 840 thousand voters, convincing them that the coalition Apruebo Dignidad is not a murga stuck with remains of the "droplet", but an ambitious project to return to Chile its quality of Republic, to the citizens its inalienable Sovereignty, and to the whole the dignity lost on September 11, 1973.

Unfortunately, the candidate stumbles, looking at the voters of Parisi first, and then at the wreckage of the Concertación.

On the other hand, the main argument that his supporters exhibit is the fear of the return of Pinochetism, of its atrocious practices, of its crimes, of its arbitrariness, of its robberies and pillages, primary reasoning based on that of "Poached cat is afraid of cold water".

It is not to take into account the granite truth that on October 18, 2019 he exposed with a clarity that dazzles: his causes were not "the thirty pesos, but the thirty years".

Thirty years of Concertación-Derecha co-government, thirty years of "consensus" and "cooking", during which the abused, the mocked, the run over, the exploited, the none... it was always the people of Chile. Under the baton of a Concertación that today appears as a reinforcement troop to win a battle that it systematically renounced, acting as a manager of the looting.

From proverb to proverb one comes to the one who prays, "Tell me who you are with and I will tell you who you are."

If Boric wins... it's going to cost us dearly.

Of Kast I say nothing, because fascism, in all its versions, is our enemy. One that was already defeated in Chile in the 1930s, when Jorge González von Marées founded the National Socialist Movement (Nazi). Among those who wore the "steel shirt" of the anti-fascist fighters was a certain Salvador Allende.
