3 cops dead in roadside explosion in Uruzgan Four Italian troops injured in bomb attack

June 17, 2012

A roadside bomb killed three police and wounded another in Uruzgan province, an official said Saturday. Abdullah Hemmat, spokesman for Uruzgan governor, told media that a landmine exploded on a police vehicle on a road linking Chinarto district to Tarinkot, capital of Uruzgan province, yesterday's evening. He said three police aboard the vehicle were killed and another wounded in the blast, adding the injured was under treatment at hospital and was in stable condition. Hemmat said the police vehicle was also destroyed in the explosion. Taliban spokesman Qari Muhammad Yousaf Ahmadi, meanwhile, told Afghan Islamic Press (AIP) that their fighters caused casualties to several police in roadside bomb and direct attacks between Tarinkot and Chinarto district. Meanwhile, four Italian troops were injured in a roadside bomb attack yesterday in western Farah province, security sources said Saturday. A vehicle of Italian troops struck a land mine in western part of Farah City, capital of Farah province, yesterday's afternoon, a senior security official said. He said four Italian troops aboard the vehicle sustained injuries in the explosion and were evacuated by helicopters to an ISAF base, adding one of the injured was in precarious condition. Sources in ISAF western command confirmed to AIP that four troops were wounded in the roadside bomb attack. When contacted, ISAF press office in Kabul said, "Operational reporting indicates an ISAF vehicle hit an IED in Farah district in Farah province on June 15 2012. ISAF reports no casualties from the incident." The incident happened at a time when Italian deputy foreign minister visited their troops in the neighbouring Herat province yesterday and also discussed security and other issues with local authorities.
