‘Foreign countries working to destabilise Afghanistan’

June 17, 2012

Several foreign countries are making conspiracies against Afghanistan in order to bring instability in Afghanistan, Head of Afghanistan's High Peace Council Salahuddin Rabbani said on Saturday. Speaking at a women conference held by Afghan Women Network (AWN), Mr Rabbani cited the role of women very important in bringing peace and stability in Afghanistan adding that the enemies of Afghanistan are trying to bring chaos in the country and disrupt peace negotiations. However, he emphasized that Afghan people not allow the enemies to do so. "Our country has been bothered during its history, we have been patient towards all the disasters and shown bravery. Despite that, some internal issues and foreign conspirators are trying to challenge peace negotiations." Mr Salahuddin added while speaking at the (Hope for Peace) conference held in Kabul on Saturday. Meanwhile, member of Afghan High Peace Council, Mohammad Amin Weqad believes on a strong role and support of civil society organizations including universities, parliament, political parties and education entities. "High Peace Council needs cooperation from parliament, civil society organizations, political parties, universities and education sector." Weqad said. "Peace process is Afghan-owned and Afghan-led only, peace council can only represent Afghan people." Lack of transparent and honest cooperation of the neighbouring countries including Pakistan has caused major challenges for peace negotiations in Afghanistan however, the council officials to call on the neighbouring countries to support Afghan peace process. This comes as, in the conference held in Kabul last week, regional countries including Iran and Pakistan and pledged to support Afghanistan.
