Taliban kill 4 Afghan soldiers, injure 2 others in northeast

12/11/2012

Clashes between Afghan security forces and Taliban militants have left at least four soldiers dead in the country's northeast.

According to local officials, the attack took place on Tuesday morning in the town of Tagab in the northeastern province of Kapisa.

Kapisa officials further told Press TV that two other soldiers were injured in the deadly clashes.

An unknown number of Taliban militants were also said to have been killed and wounded in the attack.

Taliban spokesman Zabiullah Mujahid claimed responsibility for the assault, claiming that the violence has killed 8 Afghan soldiers.

Meanwhile on Monday, Nimroz police chief Musa Rasouli lost his life after his car hit a roadside bomb in the western province.

Rasouli died while being taken to hospital, the Nimroz police spokesman Moyedin Noori said, adding, "It was a Taliban bomb."

Unknown gunmen also killed Nadia Sidiqi, the acting director of the women's affairs department in the eastern province of Laghman, on the same day.

The United States and its allies invaded Afghanistan in 2001 as part of Washington's so-called war on terror. The offensive removed the Taliban from power, but insecurity remains high across the country.
