July 19, 2013

At least five civilians were killed and four others were injured following separate explosions in western and eastern provinces of Afghanistan.

Provincial security chief for eastern Paktika province of Afghanistan Gen. Dawlat Khan Zadran said at least three kids and two women were killed following an explosion in a residential house in this province.

Gen. Zadran further added that the house was used to create improvised explosive device and as the storage of explosives for the Taliban group. The incident accidentally took place while the children were touching the explosives.

He said another woman was also injured following the explosion, and the dead bodies of the victims were buried on Thursday evening.

In a separate incident three civilians were injured after a roadside improvised explosive device went off in western Farah province of Afghanistan.

No group including the Taliban militants has so far claimed responsibility behind the incident.
