Protest against Iran turn violent in Herat, leaves 2 dead

September 7, 2013

According to reports, at least two people were killed and many others were injured after protest turned into violence in western Herat province of Afghanistan on Saturday.

The incident reportedly took place after security forces opened fire on protesters who had gathered near the Iranian consulate in this province.

The protesters staged demonstrations against the Iranian consulate in Herat province, accusing the consulate officials for misbehaving with the visa applicants.

In the meantime, a spokesman for the provincial security department, Abdul Rauf Ahmadi confirmed that the protests turned into violence, leaving at least 1 protester dead and two others injured.

Provincial security chief also said that a number of the Afghan police officers were injured and several shops were burnt by the protesters.
