Suicide bombers sexually abused in training camps: NDS

September 23, 2013

Suicide bombers are sexually abused and raped while they are trained on how to carry out suicide attack and terrorist activities, in training camps, Afghan intelligence officials said.

Afghan intelligence — National Directorate of Security (NDS) following a statement on Monday said that the suicide bombers are facing sexual abuse by their trainers.

A suicide bomber who was arrested in western Herat province of Afghanistan quoted in the NDS statement has confessed that he was sexually abused along with many others who were receiving suicide training.

The detained bomber recognized as Nematullah was looking to carry out suicide attack using a motorcycle in western Herat province of Afghanistan.

Nematullah further added that he received suicide attack training by militant leader Mullah Ahmad also known as Mullah Akhtar, and was sent to Adraskan district for suicide attack.

He said the militant leaders, Mullah Nasim and Mullah Akhtar were giving tablets to suicide bombers and were repeatedly abusing them sexually, after they were affected by medicine and were getting unconscious.
