Analyst accuses US intelligence agencies of funding terrorism

5/13/2014

A political analyst in Florida accuses the intelligence agencies in the United States and some European countries of covertly funding terrorist organizations across the world.

“The intelligence community is not only supporting different terrorist organizations, but they’re also funding it,” said Scott Rickard, a former American intelligence linguist.

America’s intelligence community “has been funding terrorist organizations for some time now, for a couple of reasons,” Rickard said. “Most of the time they’re using them as basically mercenaries to fight their adversaries, so the enemy of my enemy is my friend.”

The Western financial community – like Swiss-based UBS – has also funded terrorism to justify the so-called war on terror, which is “another dark hole of corruption,” he told Press TV on Monday.

According to documents released by Iowa Senator Chuck Grassley, the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) secretly assembled a terrorist “hands off” list that permitted individuals with terrorist ties unfettered entrance into the United States.

The existence of a “hands off” list that permitted easy entrance for suspect individuals into the United States has drawn concern from Grassley, who released a cache of internal DHS emails detailing the list’s existence and discussion about permitting an alleged terrorist to enter the United States.
