ISI and Haqqani Network behind attack on Kabul airport: MoI

7/17/2014

Afghanistan accused Haqqani Network and Pakistan's Inter-Service Intelligence (ISI) behind the attack on Kabul airport.

Interior ministry spokesman, Sediq Sediqi, told reporters that the attack on Kabul airport was either plotted by Haqqani Network or the Pakistani military intelligence – Inter-Service Intelligence (ISI).

Sediqi further added that the attack on Kabul airport is apparently plotted to avenge the coordinated attack on Karachi airport, as Pakistani believes Afghanistan was involved behind the attack.

He said the Haqqani Network, Taliban group and Pakistan's ISI have continuously attempted to attack the airport in Afghanistan.

According to Sediqi, ISI is keen to stop the international flights in Afghanistan after similar flights were halted in Karachi following the Taliban attack.

The attack on Kabul airport was launched by a group of at five militants who took their positions inside an under construction building located close to the airport.

Interior ministry officials said all militants were eliminated during the gun battle with the Afghan security forces and no damages were incurred to airport.

The officials also added that the assailant militants were of Pakistani origin as they were speaking in Urudu language.

In the meantime, the Foreign Office of Pakistan condemned the attack on Kabul airport and said there is justification for such a violent act.
