Explosion rocks capital Kabul, casualties feared

September 29, 2014

A heavy explosion rocked capital Kabul early Monday amid tight security for the presidential inauguration.

The blast has reportedly taken place in the vicinity of Kabul airport. Preliminary reports suggest at least four people were killed and a number of others were injured following the blast.

The type of explosion is not clear so far and security officials have not commented regarding the incident yet.

In the meantime, eyewitnesses in the area are saying a suicide bomber has detonated his explosives near the vehicles of the Afghan intelligence operatives, killing four people and six others.
