Three NATO soldiers, three Afghan police killed in attacks

Jul 10, 2011, 7:17 GMT

Kabul - Three NATO soldiers and three Afghan policemen were killed separate attacks, while 10 insurgents were reportedly killed elsewhere, officials said Sunday.

A roadside bomb Sunday in the southern city of Kandahar killed the police and injured three civilians including a child, the provincial governor's office said.

Minutes later, another roadside bomb was remotely detonated as a NATO convoy passed on the same road and injured one soldier, an official said.

NATO said three of its troops were killed in separate attacks and bombing in the southern and eastern regions Sunday.

Two of the soldiers were killed by a roadside bomb and insurgents attacks in south while another died in combat in the east, it said.

The coalition forces did not reveal the deceased's nationalities nor the exact location of the attacks. More than 12 foreign soldiers have been so far killed this month.

Ten Taliban insurgents were reportedly killed in southern Uruzgan province on Saturday night when the militants clashed with police, Fazal Ahmad Sherzad, provincial police chief, said.

'Three policemen were also wounded in the fight,' he said.
